EVERYDOOT instinctively confides in these who are like himself in education and nationality. The Englishman frusts to the Englishman, the Frenchman to the Frenchman, the American to the American, rather than to nations in the world, and find the same role to hold good. But, familiar as this fact is, it is completely lost sight of in all our estimates of the Chinese. A saving faith within us makes us fully persuaded that the unwith Englishmen, and English customs to become thoroughly impressed with their superiority over anything which he can find in his own unhappy country. Notwithstanding our familiarity with the fact that of all people in the world the Chinese are the most pertinacious in clinging to old traditions, we still have such unbounded being in the suporiority of our own institutions and of ourselves, that we take it as an axiom that we cannot possibly do better than adhere to our somewhat disappointed as to results, we casily console ourselves with the reflection that time only is wanted to set all right, and that in the long run the Celestial will become imbued with as thorough an appreciation of our institutions as we fortunately or unfortunately already entertain ourselves. Some excuse for this is no doubt to be found mitted to bail, the owner of the vehicle in the exaggerated politoness of the Obinese -politeness which we should simply call Chinamen conveys, and is intended to convey little more than the merest conventionalities -the "dear Sirs" and " obedient servants" current among foreigners. The Chinaman considers it only ordinary politeness to appear immensely improssed with overything foreign, and would be very much surprised if he were told that this "palaver" was taken seriously. But seriously it is taken by a! very large number of very well meaning people, and the result is that, while the Chinaman is laughing at the absurdities of foreign customs, the foreigner is congratula; ting himself upon the happy influence he is all unemployed seamen, charged with having exerting upon the Celestial mind. This principle receives a very grotesque illustration in baving behaved in a manner likely to bring on the childlike faith repeatedly shown in the a street riot, were fined, the first 50 cents, and British Constitution in Hongkong. The grossest absurdities are committed; the Chinese are left in utter ignorance of what the laws are or what they are expected to do; and the result is utter confusion and misgovernment, but the British Constitution is adhered to in full confidence that it must afford a panacea for allills. It is not surprising under such circumstances that the difficulties we experience are neither few nor small; and that at times we may almost feel ready to in the year 1863, at Shanghai, was fined 50 despair of the possibility of Europeaus go- cents, in default two days' imprisonment. verning the Chinese at all. Much of the difficulty really, however, arises from our complete ignorance of all the Chinese wants. habits and traditions. The REGISTRAN-GEN-ERAL, is the sole chink through which any ray of knowledge penetrates to the Governmental mind, or through which the Colestial can become aware of the wise laws and free institutions which it is his happy lot to be under in this great British Colony, where we constantly hear of the moral influence which we are exerting on the Chinese. Is it wonderful that for all the cant that is uttered the plain fact romains that the Chinese have absolutely no confidence in the English Government of this place; and that there is scarcely a man among them, who, if he spoke his mind, would not declare his conviction nisance entered into by him before Inspector that it would be far better governed by Native Authorities than it is at present, notadvantages which we are conferring? This may be an unpalatable fact, but it is true ! and many who have great ideas on the value of British institutions in this Colony may ing "they seem to take a great deal of trouble about dead Chinamen, but very little when he attempted to prevent them from effectabout the living." Times of the 9th inst. -"The depression which pervades San Frant cisco, and a large part of California, is yielding some wholesome fruit. The rescality that has characterized the management of mining interests in that State and Nevada is being exposed with a particularity which should suggoet to Enstern people the general inexpediency of risking their money in remote mining enterprises. The Lake Superior copper companies have, in their day, furnished some striking lescons upon this subject. FRENCH AND GERMAN ARTILLERY.

The new 12-nounder field wans of the French produce, it is said, a very different effect from the wretched little four-pounders with which the war begun, and which have coused it to be said, with much truth, that the Eronch because the war almost without artillory so annerior in that respect was their better-prepared opponent. The mitrailleurs seem now to be better managed than they were at first. The plan now-at least it has been so on the Loire-is to fire at a range from which the bullets reach the enemy posttered over a line. It is the opinion of some experienced officers, however, that a rather shorter range would have a more g moral effect—such a distance send all the bullets within some forty feet, line of troops fired at. Probably both plans might be advantageously resorted to, according to circumstances. It is observed that one effect of the long range of the Chassepot is one has just traversed as confidently and as safely as if it were Hyde park may become en such occasions a trap for bullets. Aimed at objects upon its adge, they fly past them to unknown distances, and the casualties which thus occur form a large proportion of the losses in recent battles. General von Treskow in a few days had three borses killed under him, and General von Manteufful two. One result of this ancertain flying of Chassopot bullets is that it nakes it almost impossible for the ambulances to look for the wounded until the battle is over. Without meaning mischief to them, the enemy's bullets come whizzing over the plains strewed with dead and dying long after the fary of the combat has rolled to some other quarter, and he wounded are left without the attendance. which they would have received were it possible to approach them with g eater enfety. Unhappily, the deaths in this corps are not always val, while a member of the Hamburg ambulance was in a room in the village dressing the wounds of the men who were brought in from the field, rifle was put in through the window, and be was killed while engaged in his work of mercy.

on the fur trade in British North America published in the New York Herald :-"Next in novelty of conveyance is the dog train, in general use from the nothern territories of the United States to the Arctic Sea. These trains are somewhat different from the Esquimnux trains, the dogs being harnessed in single file, while those of the latter are driven abreast. Four dogs constitute a good team. They are of no particular breed, any species of good sized dogs bring used. Most of the train dogs are ball wolf, and are as sarly and violate a set of rescale as ever existed. The dog sledge consists of a thick plank, about a foot wide and ten feet long, with, the forward end turned up like a state. A dressed skin, resembling parchment in appearance, is attached to this, very much like the upper leather of a laced shoe, and the traveller, placing his ropes inside, gets in, and is wrapped up as tightly and in about the same manner as his foot would be in about the same manner as his foot would be in an English shoe. The baggage of the traveller is placed at his back, and the driver runs on snow shoes behind. The freight sledges consist of only a plank corved at the end, without any covering. Most of the dog trains have little bells and beautifully beadworked trimmings, and when faily rigged form very elegant turnouts. On the journey the dogs are fed only once a day, that being at night, when each animal is given about two pounds of permitunited is given about two pounds of pennildogs get no water, but eat snow us a substitute, and sleep at night among the drifts without any bed or covering. Sometimes they are not unharnessed on a trip, in consequence of their liability to run away or their fierceness when being harnessed up. The driver carries a small whip composed of a stick about two feet long, with a very neavy rawhids thoug of the same length, and several small pieces of tin attached to the upper end of the stick where the lash is attached. The driver always stops the train, and takes a dog out of harmess before flogging him for misconduct, and when he does punish an animal, it is in the most cruel manner, beating him over the head in all cases. In doing this the pieces of tin make a great jingling, and as the driver runs along behind the sledge he has only to call a shirking dog by name and rattle the tin to arouse the animal very suddenly. A long strip of rawhidedrags upon the ground behind the aledge, with which the driver holds it back whenever descending into a bollow. When the travelling is bad, and the dogs are liable to become disabled by the ice on the thin crust, little moschains are put upon their feet. Their average rate of speed, with a load of 100 pounds per dog, is forty miles per day; but in an emergency, with good snow, they can make seventy miles. Journeys of many hundred miles are made with such ledges in the depth of winter, and one hardly knows which to admire most, the power and speed of the dogs or the endurance of the driver who rams along behind. Very often at night, when several dog sledges are coupled together, the men sleeping in their robes and blankets on the mow, some old dog will rise up and let out a prolonged dismal howl. Instantly another joins in, and in a few moments every dog will get up into sitting position, and unite in a chorus of howling, which, if not checked, would soon make a raving manine of the traveller. No pen can adequately describe it. The dogs are an article of traffic the same as horses, and sell at from five to twenty-five dollars apiece, according to quality, there being as much difference in the "willingness" and bottom of dogs as of

F. PEIL

WITH THE PUNTI AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION. An Anglo-Chinese Dictionant, by the Rev. W. LOBSCHEID, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong.

Old scope and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese linve of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy, and in ecience generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon them, are here given in extenso. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exerciscs for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, the accents being carefully marked on the best principle hitherto attained. The typo-graphy displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond n the size of body, thereby effecting a vast previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant upaces which have beretofore characterized Chinese publications. The scope of the work is so great, and its ptilitarian purposes so domplete, that a reference to its pages mables a person understands English to communicate of the second with natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves it ex-plains subjects fully, with which very few in-

Personal Personages. (Speciator.) Newspapers bare an obstacle to contend with in their daily record of history, which very often escapes attention, and that is the difficulty they have both in obtaining and diffusing that clear impression of the minds of the leading persounges in the world which those who may read the history a century beace will probably possess. This knowledge is very often essential. to the comprehension even of duily facts, and isalways essential to the understanding of their general bearing; you it is sometimes unattainable by publicists, and almost invariably unattainable by their renders. Foreigners very selcom quite understand the governing men even of free countries, men who are inceraently before the public : and of the Personal Perwonages, as they may be called, the men who are powerful from other reasons than their oloquence or their official acts, it is hard to get and barder to publish the morest cutling of truth. Nobody, perhaps, in possession of great power was ever studied with more painful attention than the Emperor Napoleon, and certainly nobody ever was described with less of respectful reticouca.
